> BEHEADING AT KOWLOON CITY. We got an invitation through the mandarin in command of the forts at Kowloon City to attend the beheading of two criminals which was to take place there, we understood, at ten o'clock this morning. Such a scene is not one to please the eye, the nose or the more delicate moral sense of any European, but it has the attraction of novelty even in these parts, and we doubt not, had a similar invitation been given with similar facilities in England on Derby day, there would have been a very formidable rival attraction to the far-famed

Till but some weeks ago there has not been within the memory of that friend of ours, the oldest inhabitant, a scene of headlopping off-for such is perhaps a more expressive term for the ceremony performed to-day-at Kowloon City; but apparently the proximity to British territory is not a deterrent but an incentive to crime to the roughs that infeat the coast and more rigorous punishment had to be resorted to. The facility with which criminals can claim the protection of the merciful laws of Britain and the admirable facility which these laws affordif an able enough lawyer can be got -of defeating the ends of justice, has made the surrounding Chinese territory a rather hot place for the more peaceful residents. To strike terror into such criminals and to show in all its ugliness the severity of Chinese laws it has been decreed that an old law permitting executions to take place in such a centre as Kowlcon City should be reweeks ago three notorious robbers were executed on the beach and their beads stuck up a poles for some fifteen days as a warning to all evil-doers. To-day other two paid the same heavy penalty for their orines. Invitation cards were for ten o'clock, and

However without very much friction and without very much waiting the party was landed at the grand wharf at Kuwloon City. As this with a crowd of female coolies engaged discharging molasses from a junk it was with difficulty that the Enropean gentlemen forged their way to the dung-hill of rubbish that flanks the town end of the landing place. Passing across this mound they hent their way to the interior of the forts where they were graciously received and generously entertained by the Captain of sidence, but for the groll of Chinese poetry and other emblems of China on the wall, might have passed for an Irish mud but but the hospitality being of the best the house contained and including as a descent English beer and sardines, the party seemed delighted with their reception. Mandarine and petty mandarina were fleating about in that quiet do-nothing signs of the approaching ceremony that the visitors began to fear that they had been mistaken as to the day and hour of the scene. They were speedily reassured, however, by the Captain that the execution was to take piece that day, but that the hour was not ten but eleven o'clock. In the interval the mandarin was as kind as to give some details with regard to the crimes for which the men suffered. It appears that, although they have a pretty long criminal history, the special

On the ramparts, -if the dilapidated stone-work may be called by that term - were two standard bearers beside the flags of the fort which waved proudly from each angle of the building. Lying off in the harbour was the thinese gunboat which had brought the prisoners from lack-fung, where they were sentenced some three or four days ago. About half past eleven o'clock the distant sound of a trumpet was heard, which as it approached, resounded ike a gong call for dinner. It was at this moment that the Chinese in the village seemed to become first aware that something unusual was to happen. Soon a large crowd gathered round the imposing wharf entrance and the crowd awelled in numbers as the procession, headed by the two trumpeters. approached the beach. Behind the trumpeters came a standard bearer with the mandarin flag, then followed a small company of braves' with spears, swords and tridents, behind whom were soldiers in single file, armed with rifles. The whole detechment, which it was evident had been sent forward as an advance guard, was under the charge of two petty officers. They bere along with them two chairs, which were placed on the beach for two mandarins who were to preside over the ghastly caremony. These two dignitaries. with their white buttons and their peacock feathers, next made their appearance, and took their seats on the beach with the air of two Canutes who were about to bic the waves recode at their command. In about another quarter of an hour the Captain of the forts, with his crystal buttons and all his resplendent toggery, put in an appearance, and at his request the party of Europeans moved towards the scene of execution. There they were most graciously received by the two mandarins, who were seated in front of the immense crowd, which had meantime gathered and which the soldiers held back in the form, as far as the ground permitted it, of a semi-circle. So ardent, however, was the desire of some of the Chinese to see the spectacle that they waded deep into the sea to get clear of the braves who lined the edge of the water. By this time the sound of the approaching procession was heard, their advance being marked by the firing of three salutes from the forts or prison in the town and the forts on the beach. Walker started, and put on 119 runs in en hour and a quarter for the first wicket. The A champion batted n good free form and hit hard, though the ball did not of course travel at all well. The late Middlesex captain, though he hit hard, appeared to play a very rash game after a time, and he was remarkably lucky, being missed in the field quite four times. Between about 70 and the fall of the first wicket the visi'ors' fielding fell off terribly. They not only dropped several easy catches, but they did not shape much like cricketers. Afterwards, however, they improved, and the anbsequent batsmen, who are not of course of anything like the ame class as the first pair, did not find scoring as very easy. The Parsons should certainly get out of the habit of constantly returning the ball to the wicketkeeper, whether there is any prospect of a run or not. A good deal of time was wasted this way during the after noon. Major's bowling, medium par be considerably the best of any poster, then by the side. a promise of a report to the Throne upon Lindsay and Robertson were beginning to score rapidly when time was called and stumps were pulled up. They had added 36 runs since the fall of the fifth wicket. The boundary on the tavern side only c unted three in consequence of the wickets being pitched very low down the ground. Therefore, in considering the figures o the chief scorors, it must be remembered that the 3's were boundary hits, and the is hits that pitched out of the playing arena. W. G. Grace spored two 4's, ten 3's, a 2, and 25 singles; and L. D. Walker 4, five 3's, eight 2's, and singles. The bowling of D. H. Patell, fast underhand seemed erratic, but not altogether easy; Framjee has an easy delivery, and bowls fast round arm at a good pace; but S. N. Bhedwhar (underhand with a curious action) and D. T. Khambatta (lefthand medium pace) did not make much impression.

Trubner's Oriental Record contains the following notice of the China Review:-The present publication, judging by the number now before us, is intended to occupy a position, as regards China and the neighbouring countries, some what similar to that which has been filled in India by the Calcutta Review. The great degree of attention that has been bestowed of late years upon the investigation of Chinese literature, antiquities, and social developments, to say nothing of linguistic studies, has led to the accumulation of important stores of inform ation, rendering some such channel of publicity as is now provided extremely design able; and contributions of much interes may fairly be looked or from the members of the foreign consular services, the Chinese Customs' corps, and the missionary body among whom a high degree of Chinese scholarship is now assiduously cultivated and who are severally represented in the first number of the Review by papers highly creditable to their respective authors Some translations from Chinese novels and 1210 plays are marked by both accuracy and freshness of style; and an account of the career of the Chinese poet-statesman of the eleventh century, Su Tang-p'o, by Mr. E. C. Bowra, is not only historically valuable, but is also distinguished by its literary grace. Beside notices of new books relating to China and the East, which will be a useful feature of the Review, if carried out with punctuality and detail, we are glad to notice that 'Notes' and 'Queries' are destined to find a place in its pages also. It is to he hoped that this opening for contributions on Chinese subjects may evoke a similar degree of literary real to that which was displayed during the lifetime of its prede-
